As you know, we represent a group which is engaged in research on the economies of the Sino-Soviet Bloc countries. We are looking primarily for students trained in economics, but we also wish to interview candidates in related social science fields who are interested in applying their respective disciplines to research on the economies of the Sino-Soviet Bloc. Our principal requirement is for graduate students, but we would also be happy to interview undergraduates whom you believe to be exceptionally promising. We can only consider individuals who have been US citizens for a minimum of five years. Positions with our group will be available beginning in early 1960. I would appreciate your recommendations of persons who appear to be particularly well qualified for our type of work, since I will especially want to see those candidates whom you and other department members personally recommend. Incidentally, I am also writing [redacted]

I look forward to seeing you in October and will call when I arrive on campus.

Sincerely,
